

Mondo Diddley

I'm standing on a wall to the sky on a point the size of a pin One side of my face is black as night other shines like a railroad light Got a bucket of love in one of my hands light as the breath of the sea Got a bucket of blood in the other it's dragging down on me

Being here with you is the best place I can be
I'm standing on a wall to the sky
I'm light as the breath of the sea Well, the words come out my eyes and I catch 'em on my tongue I spit them out on the forest floor
Where the mice and chickens run

Spent so many years in the desert
I can't shake the sand from my eyes
The dog that sleeps at the foot of my bed calls me on all my lies My version of the truth is cut from smoke and glass and it's hard to tell the present from the future and the past
